BTW,

I ran the NASD's website public search of disciplinary information available on Bernard L. Madoff Investment Securities LLC and came up with the following information, current as of November 24, 2003, BLM has two regulatory items:

1. In 1963, BLM was fined $500 for a technical infraction; and
2. In 1975, BLM was fined $25 - no other information is available on this $25 fine due to the age of the action.

End of Report.

1. As Jeffrey explained to them in the conference room, the NASD audit of Madoff is not publicly available, nor do we have a copy. If in any of the numerous NASD audits Madoff Securities was found to have violated any NASD rule, or any federal securities law, rule or regulation, the NASD would take disciplinary action and disciplinary information on firms and individuals is publicly available. To check the background on any BD they can go to the NASD website:

<http://www.nasdr.com/2000.asp>

2. Dan may be a better resource on these two items.

Thank you very much for arranging the various very interesting and useful meetings last week.

Regarding Fairfield Sentry I wanted to remind you of a few follow-up items that we agreed upon and that Bruno and I look forward to receiving in due course:

1. You wanted to send us a complete copy of the latest NASD audit on Madoff
2. Are complete (rather than just abbreviated) audited financial statements available on Madoff
3. Is the auditor that Madoff uses recognized within this industry? Are references available?

Also, shortly, my partner Christopher Neve and I would like spend some time in your offices to go through maybe three months worth of Fairfield Sentry statements and trade tickets. Also, could you us a copy of the latest audit financial statements of Fairfield Sentry?

Thank you for your help.

Best regards

Benjamin Schliemann
